not every man who concealed a dagger for the Monarch's heart, under the cloak of loyalty in profession, full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom! Suffice it to say that from 1668 till 1696 not one year free from plots, conspiracies, and discovery of treasonable practices - all originating in divine inspiration! but the inspiring divinity is "Our Lord God the Pope." The Gunpowder Plot comes next; the result and that, too, the result of popes legislation, the massacre of 1641; and in 1685 with the royal traitor, James II., league with France, and at the bench of all the Popists of Britain in open revolt.

In 1875, Lord Chelmsford wrote the doctrine of the Papists as depriving if their pernicious influence on civil so did not require and authorize restraint truly lordship had estimated their activity. But all these rebellions, it may be said, were occasioned by a policy of repression. Surely concession would secure loyalty of the Papists in Britain. Let us answer, Let facts determine. Were not the concessions of 1773 followed by the villanies which gave rise to the "Intolerable Act"? The concessions of 1778 were followed by the same kind of grievance and those of 1782 were thankfully acknowledged by the outrages of the White Star. And were not the elective franchise of 1792, and the first grant to Maynooth 1793 recompensed by the rebellion of 1798? And were not the Emancipation in 1829, the Municipal Corporation and the Charitable Bequests' Bill, and the present endowment of Maynooth, the speeches and rebellion of 1848? Are we not the Papists within Britain, withstanding all these concessions, royal, as traitorous, at this moment, ever were! What mean the two McMahon, and the discovery that belongs to a line of ancient Irish kings the invitation to Lumiere, and the bill, "A Garibaldi wanted for Ireland and the resurrection of the papal. Has not all experience proved every concession has been made the of another, a greater and more demand!

No, Brethren, no, the disloyal Papists to a Protestant, to the British crown, is a religious sentiment as the Pope's supremacy is. The therefore, can never conciliate the dicating the progress towards its own annihilation in the ultimate over-ple, Brethren, which necessitates your federation—for Orangemen is a just and organization—and the only organizawhich, within the wide scope of the Empire, meets and confronts the sup-of the Pope, and the despotism of P with the supremacy of the British eign, and the loyalty of the Protest jects. You cannot therefore dissol

Canada for the British Crown, and wh

When, in 1837, the 'Caroline' freighted with arms and ammunition for the rebellion was cut adrift and sent in flames over the Falls of Niagara, disappeared for ever in the gulf beneath, an earnest was given that rebellion then and ever will be crushed, and to dare to raise its front in the presence of true-hearted Protestants.

of Canada—services—admission and known—time—time with grief and indignation—of the insulting and unconstitutional conduct of the Duke of Newcastle, in refusing to allow the Prince of Wales, on his last visit to your country, to enter any town in which Orangemen should appear in the decorations of the Order; and that, although they had been invited to join the authorities in the presence of the Prince by the civic authorities of the towns, no objection was made to processions of Orangemen, with their distinctive banners and decorations; nor was the Prince prevented entering towns where the tricolor flag flew on a level with the standard of England.

Sir, we admire the talent, firmness, and judgement displayed by you on this trying occasion. We see you in every stage of the reasoning, and you yourself and your coadjutors in the right, in showing the inconsistency and folly of the Orangemen.

We admire also the calmness and dignity with which the Orangemen of Cambridge bore the undesired insult, during the presence of the Prince in their country, and the manner in which they calmly and bravely have since taken to demand satisfaction and reparation for the wrongs they have sustained.

The Duke of Newcastle, in his letter to the Mayor of Kingston, almost sneeringly says that all the new-made hats and articles of dress should be laid aside.

The Orangemen were only to be looked upon as mere articles of dress, his denunciation was puerile. Shortly after his Grace's departure to England, he was invested by the

ter. His Blue Ribband no more than an article of dress—though one which it is the first time that England ever produced. When I look at the origin of that order, we find it lost in the gloom of the middle ages—and we see nothing now in the wearing of its decorations, except that he who is adorned by it has the proud definition of being honourable. The loss of the last link of the chain we see in the Orange sash, our mind travels to the time when the greatest European Monarchs, with unmatched courage and unequalled ability and energy, engaged and carried into a successful issue the cause of the Protestant faith, and both temporal and spiritual despots which resulted in the deliverance of his now free Protestant Provinces of Holland and of civil and religious liberty in our country. We know that the heart beats under the Orange sash loves the cherishes, and will maintain, while life remains, those great principles of liberty, justice, and the advancement of which William of Orange lived and fought and reigned.

"It has been lately said that no necessity now exists for the Orange Institution, that the time for such an organization has passed, that the people are too enlightened to be misled by a man in a red coat. I think so. In 1837, Canada was held for the British Crown by her Orangemen. In 1843, Ireland was saved from rebellion by the existence in it of the Orange Institution and the power and numbers of its members. It is not long enough since that the life of a nation rested upon an Institution Irishmen in the Sixes. There are 200,000 Irish in Canada; there are still traitors in Ireland, who would welcome any foreign invader hostile to England. England has herself a Government of armed volunteers. The Government of Canada is forming a Volunteer Corps in Ireland. May it not be because they are aware that the Orange Institution is, as it always has been, ready to turn out its tens of thousands in defence of the Queen and Country.

The Queen has commanded that these enemies which have caused us the pleasure of seeing them in our midst, will tend to draw us closer together the bonds of affection between the Protestants of your Canada and us in the old land, and with Ireland.

"Finally, air, farewell. We will assuage you to hear to our Protestant brethren in Canada, the assurance of our sympathy and affection; and we trust that there exists in Old Ireland a large and increasing band of Protestants, who hold as firmly and faithfully as you and your brethren in the west, those principles of Protestant truth and loyalty which have been the foundation-stone of our common ancestors.

"We pray you may return in safety to your home; and long be spared and enabled by our Heavenly Father to aid and guide the Orangemen of Canada."
